

Here is the National Hail Research Experiment Report for Tuesday, July 16.

Yesterday ended quietly at the experimental area along the Colorado- Nebraska line. No storms threatened the area and it was not declared a hail day.

As of 4:15 today, ~~XXXXXXXXXXXX~~ there are storms on the northern and western edges of the experimental area and rain reported near ~~XX~~ Grover, Colorado and Kimball Nebraska. But the radar readings do not yet indicate that hail threatens and the researchers have not yet declared whether tuesday will or will not be a hail day.
